

THE NEW RULES FOR DRAFTING PLAYERS

Report Made Public Explaining What Decisions of National Committee Means.

CINCINNATI, O., January 18.—The decisions reached by the National Baseball Committee, at its meeting last week, are fully explained in the report made public to-day. The proposition to draft players only from the clubs in the next lower league is disapproved. "Cause it is an violation of that objection of the national arrangement which provides for the promotion of the welfare of ball players by developing them and perfecting them in their profession and enabling them to secure adequate compensation for their exertions. A player in Class D could advance to a major league only at the end of three years, which the committee believes to be wrong."

The national committee expressed approval of the suggestion that major league clubs be limited to twenty-five players at any time, and that only eighteen players be carried during the playing season. The reason given for opposing the change in classification of the Pacific Coast League and others is that when the Pacific Coast League was admitted to organized baseball it was distinctly agreed that it should be a Class A league. So far as the other leagues mentioned, the Southern and Western, are concerned, the National League of minor leagues is said to have full authority.

The resolution aimed against the "farming" of players is approved in principle. The committee stated that it had already adopted measures to the same end.

Disagreeing with the request for reinstatement of certain ineligible players, it is stated that "where applications for reinstatement have been refused by the committee, that action was only taken because the facts in each case warranted such refusal. The commission has also gone on record as holding that it would not consider an application for the reinstatement of a minor league player unless such application has been first made to the proper officers of the National Association."

WILD ANIMAL SHOW

Many New Features to Be Introduced at Jungle This Week.

Many new and interesting features will be introduced at the Jungle during this week. "Penny Arthur" will appear in new stunts in his dog and monkey show. Captain Martin's group of Russian "Teddy" bears are close competitors for the comedy honors. One of the most interesting numbers on the program is the act of Captain Clarke's mixed group of panthers, jaguars and leopards. A few weeks ago Captain Clarke was lacerated by Sultan, one of the most ferocious animals in the entire collection at the zoo. For some weeks it was thought he would lose his left arm, but he finally pulled through safely and now appears again in a trainer's dress.

Madame Marcelle, the French trainer, adds an act that keeps the audience on the alert. By special request La Belle Sellen will be seen in new dances, and the sea-lions in their act will add to the general excitement of the bill.

On Friday night the North Side Baptist Sunday school will have a benefit at the zoo, and a large crowd is expected on this occasion.

RACING IN ENGLAND AND THE MID-WEST

Racing in England was very prosperous this year, though the present British government does not look on the sport, or rather the speculation it is bound to provoke, with a very favorable eye, so there may be rocks ahead if the Campbell-Bannerman cabinet remains in power.

Last season the cognoscenti considered the two-year-olds, as represented by Polar Star, Silver Gallion, and Galvani, as an exceptionally brilliant lot, but they proved utterly wrong, as Silver Gallion, the best two-year-old performer of the season, failed to win the Two Thousand Guineas over a mile course he was easily beaten for the Derby by the Anglo-American colt Orby, whose two-year-old record was nil, while the pair were separated by the curiously named Woolwinder, considered only a third rater during his juvenile career. Had Orby not started as a three-year-old prior to the Derby he would probably have remained an exciting outsider in the future betting, but a victory for a three-year-old stake at Liverpool during the first week of the season called attention to his merits, although on that occasion he was receiving weight from all the other starters and the class was moderate. In consequence he was not considered a Derby possibility till he proved he could stay by a meritorious victory in the future event, the investments of the future event speculators are usually made on the best two-year-old performers, the victory for a great English stake of a recent vintage, while Mr. Croker, has not endeavored to ingratiate himself with influential British owners, so the victory of his Yale blue colors for the greatest race of the season was not very enthusiastically received, though Orby took the Irish Derby two weeks later.

Unfortunately Mr. Croker elected to run his colt at Liverpool, the scene of his initial triumph. The course at Aintree is always hard, especially so in July, so Orby's start in the St. George stakes over it resulted in his downfall, and he returned to Ireland with a badly bowed tendon, ample excuse for his defeat. His injury is so serious that it is doubtful whether he can ever again show his true form, at any rate he could not be prepared for the St. Leger, which in consequence fell to Woolwinder, who had finished second to him for the Derby. This, of course, was the form of the Derby, so he should prove the valuable in domestic life, as he is by Ormonde's best son, Orme, the sire of Flying Fox, while his dam, American bred Rhoda B., being by Hanover, son of Hindoo and Becherelle, by Bonnie Scotland, represents our best strains of American blood on the sire's side, while her dam, Marguerite, was by the strictly American-bred Algerine grandchild of Orme. Thus Orby combines the best blood of two continents, so should be quite as valuable for stud purposes as his illustrious relative, Flying Fox. His name is, of course, derived from that of his sire and dam combined, but it would have fitted a Derby winner better if the final and apparently unnecessary letter had been omitted. Mr. Croker has a very promising half sister to his Derby winner in Rhodora, who, next to Lesbia, is considered the best two-year-old of the past English season. Lesbia, a full sister to the famous filly Fair by St. Frusquin-Glare, is described as being on the small side, so the slashing Rhodora may not prove her superior. The only colt likely to beat these flying fillies next year is Vainose, a full brother to Flying Fox.

The success of the Yale blue jacket marked the third victory of an American owner for the English Derby. The initial success, that of Iroquois in 1881, was, of course, the most satisfactory one, as the colt was bred on this side and owned by Pierre Lorillard, whose cherry and black colors were popular on both sides of the Atlantic. The success of Mr. Whitney was not so pleasing, as he did not even own the English-bred colt, which carried his Eton blue jacket to victory, for he only leased Volodyovski from Lady Meux during his racing career. The third success reads better, as although the sire of Orby was English and the colt was foaled at his owner's English estate near Letcombe Regis, his dam was of pure American parentage, and he was bred and owned by an American who had spent vast sums for yearlings in his adopted country that none should have grumbled when a colt of his own raising proved very rapidly in this line of sport for several seasons through P. T. Fineran, of New York, and are stronger than ever this season.

PINEHURST, N. C., January 18.—The semi-annual and final rounds in the advertising men's golf tournament were played at Pinehurst during the week of golf. In addition to the final the events were a match play handicap for women and a medal play handicap and a thirty-six hole professional match.

Adams, also of New York, in a close match.

Miss Eleanor Freeman, of Brooklyn, won the women's match play handicap and professional match, defeating G. B. Adams, of Springfield, and G. B. Nichols, defeated Alexander Ross (open championship) and G. B. Adams, in a match play event.

successful after all his expensive purchases had turned out failures.

The successes of Mr. Keene and Mr. Croker with colts of their own raising should induce some of our amateur farmers to invest in a few choice bred mares, for this is certainly the surest and cheapest way to attempt the somewhat difficult feat of owning a champion. They certainly could not waste in this industry at a better time, for at recent sales many mares in whose veins flowed the choicest strains of blood to be found in the world failed to even show reasonable bids, while the few which changed owners were not sold but sacrificed.

The Midwest. In the Midwest the racing outlook still remains cloudy. For the past two seasons all courses have been closed, and probably will remain so next summer. If this is the case, thousands of the inhabitants of the Western metropolises will again be debarred from the really innocent pleasure of an afternoon on a race-course might afford them, while tens of thousands of those visitors from the immense territory subsidiary to Chicago, who used to visit that city to see the equine champions of the world, where poolrooms run wide open. If this is not the case, how can the vendors of valuable information afford the great expense they incur in advertising the gold bricks they sell their dupes? From any standpoint, the man who offers a bet to a tipsy criminal with the taker; so why do not the brilliant young lawyers who are working so hard to furnish evidence for grand juries stop this fruitful source of information and find out the names of the very foolish persons who enable these tipsters to pay their advertising bills?

Again, if there is no betting in Chicago, why do the afternoon papers write column after column of racing vain attempts to select winners, while in order to help out the poor bookmakers they even have the audacity to print in large type, "The one best bet?"

Really such question are puerile. Every sensible man who is acquainted with the subject knows that betting will continue despite the efforts of grand juries and calumny prosecuting attorneys. They also know that those who bet on races at a distance are gamblers pure and simple, who take not the slightest interest in the horse per se nor contribute a cent towards his keep, as do those who visit race courses. The same is the case with the bookmakers who prey on these infatuated fools to such an extent that they can afford to laugh at heavy fines, even though the bulk of their ostensible profits must be absorbed by the cappers who make it so easy for their victims to put down a bet.

The only excuse for hampering racing around Chicago is that it induces such foolish small fry as patronize the hand books to bet more than they can afford, in consequence forcing them to starve their families or rob their employers. This excuse is not a valid one. High class racing for reasonable periods would afford no attraction to these people, especially if the admission fees equaled those charged by Eastern courses.

Chicago is not Illinois. In the same respect as Paris is not France. Like New York, it is the centre of a wide territory. Like New York, it has nothing to gain by affiliations with weaker centres, as far as, at least, as initial steps. Promoters of the new turf matters are concerned. Therefore, like New York, it should form its own jockey club, conforming, of course, to the established rules of racing, but refusing to recognize the pretensions of any less dignified institutions than its New York conferees and the powerful racing directors who rule across the seas.

All that is requisite to form a club that should be free from the persecutions of petty politicians would be for prominent business men to take the serves at least tolerance if not support, say calibre should be willing to come forward not so much for the welfare of the turf as in order to prevent the city they are so deeply interested in becoming a laughing stock for other communities sensible enough to see that a healthy sport like racing deserves the support of a healthy city.

ARE SALOONS LEGAL?

Charles Everett Newlin to Discuss Constitutional Question To-Morrow.

Mr. Charles Everett Newlin, of Indianapolis, will deliver a lecture in Broad Street Methodist Church to-morrow night at 8 o'clock on the subject, "The Unconstitutionality of Legalizing Wine."

Mr. Newlin's lecture is in the interest of anti-saloon legislation, and though there will be no admission charge to any one, lawyers and members of the Legislature are especially invited to be present.

Mr. Newlin holds that the granting of saloon licenses is unconstitutional, on the ground that the saloon is a nuisance. He is preparing to institute test cases in the courts of many States of the country, and is making this lecture tour in order to raise the amount for prosecuting the cases.

BOOST FOR TEMPERANCE.

Solicitor Clarkson Makes Rousing Prohibition Speech at Salisbury.

SALISBURY, N. C., January 18.—With a stirring address by Solicitor Harriott Clarkson, of the Mecklenburg Judicial District, the temperance cause in Rowan county was on last night given the biggest boost it has seen for a number of years. Mr. Clarkson, who is also president of the Anti-Saloon League of North Carolina, was presented to a packed house, composed of both ladies and gentlemen, by President W. B. Smoot, of the Salisbury League, who presided at the rally held last night in the courthouse.

Mr. Clarkson spoke for more than an hour, holding the closest attention of his hearers, who literally devoured the words of the speaker. He showed Rowan to be one of four counties west of the centre of the State in which liquor is sold, and that Salisbury is the stronghold of the whiskey trade in Western North Carolina. Whiskey shipped from this point, as shown by the speaker, is debauching and ruining the people of other counties within a radius of 100 miles. The solicitor showed that 20 to 25 per cent. of all crimes committed in the Mecklenburg Judicial District is directly traceable to whiskey, most of which is now shipped from Salisbury. He contended that the proper thing for the special session of the General Assembly to do next week is to pass a State prohibition law.

The speaker was roundly applauded, and his address was a ten-strike for temperance.

ARRIVAL OF MRS. ASTOR

Comes For a Visit to Mrs. Brooks and Glad To Be in America.

NEW YORK, January 18.—Mrs. Waldorf Astor, who was formerly Nannie Langhorne, the famous Virginia beauty, and later Mrs. Robert G. Shaw, before she was divorced and married the son of William Waldorf Astor, arrived yesterday on the Cunard Mauretania. She has come to this country to visit her sister, Mrs. Reginald Brooks, who was rumormongered to have died. Mrs. Astor had declared that she expected to become an aunt while in America.

"Mrs. Astor, who did not appear on deck until the ship was being made fast to the pier, was asked if her husband was to be apprehended by the Goldwater Guards."

"Why, no; he is an American citizen, is he not?" she replied. Later she said she guessed she was a subject to the King, after all.

She did not mind being interviewed in the least, for, although she first said to the reporters that she was not Mrs. Astor, as they tried to look further she laughed and called them back, saying it was all a joke on her part and that she had not intended to rude.

"I am just here for a little trip," she said. "I want to see my sister, and I do not know how long I will stay. I am always glad to get back to America. It is good to see it again."

She was dressed in a handsome brown fur coat that reached from her neck to her toes. She appeared to have made many friends during the voyage.
